Foreword

Owing to the printers' strike in New York, which lasted for two months, and because of the great increase in the cost of printing, it has seemed advisable, in the interest of timeliness and economy, to eliminate from this number of the American Art Annual the reports of Art Societies rather than delay the issue or greatly increase the price of the volume. All of the societies which are active are listed, with the names of their officers. Those that have held exhibitions during the past year are marked with an asterisk. These are arranged as heretofore, by States, alphabetically. The reports of the Museums are printed in full and have been segregated. This section is arranged by States, geographically rather than alphabetically, as it is thought that such arrangement would facilitate use and give the list additional value. It is thus made evident that 21 States have no Art Museum whatsoever, whereas one State (Ohio) can boast of no less than five. All told there are 79 Museums of Art.

The year's record of paintings sold at auction lists 2,037 paintings sold for $50 and over for a total of $872,372. Only eleven paintings sold for $5,000 and over, but a few of these brought very large sums. At the sale of the estate of Charles Stewart Smith the Kleinberger Galleries purchased Rembrandt's "John the Baptist" for $60,000. Two Gilbert Stuart portraits sold for $21,000 each, being the highest prices paid (at auction) during the year for works by an American painter. "Near the Shore, Moonrise," by Dwight W. Tryon, sold for $5,100, the highest (at auction) for a canvass by a living American painter. Thirty-two Blakelocks sold for $24,472; one going for $4,500, three brought over $2,000 and six sold for $1,000 and over. Other paintings that brought interesting prices were a Jules Breton, $9,100; a rather small pastel by Degas in the Morten sale, $8,800, and "Summer Storm," by Inness, $8,000. The sale which averaged the best was the collection of N. E. Montross, bringing $68,895 for seventy-one paintings.

The Year in Art

Events of Importance not Noted in the Reports of the Art Museum or Associations.

Notable among the events of the year was the establishment of the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation. This is the gift, by Mr. Tiffany, of his home, Laurelton Hall, at Oyster Bay, Long Island, New York, his art collections and a large endowment fund for the establishment of a school or colony for artists. The purpose is to provide a place in which artists who have received instruction and given proof of talent will be able "to find themselves" amid stimulating and sympathetic surroundings. No distinction will be made in favor of any particular class of artists—painters, sculptors, designers, and workers in industrial arts will be admitted on the same footing. Students must be American citizens between the ages of 18 and 30. During the first year women will not be admitted, but it is proposed they shall be admitted later.

Two most distinguished American art collectors have died during the year: Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, who died in New York on September 26, 1919, shortly before the Freer Gallery in Washington was completed, and Henry C. Frick, of New York, who died at his home in that city on December 2, 1919, bequeathing his spacious residence and splendid art collections to the City of New York for the benefit of the public, and providing an ample fund for their upkeep. During Mrs. Frick's lifetime, if such is her desire, the house and collections will remain in her possession.

A new Art Museum, the Butler Art Institute, built and supported by Joseph G. Butler, Jr., of Youngstown, Ohio, has been opened during the past year. Over the entrance is inscribed the words "Pro Bono Publico" (For the Public Good). The building was designed by McKim, Mead & White, and is built of Georgia marble in the style of the early Italian Renaissance. The main façade is 122 feet long and 35 feet high. It houses at present Mr. Butler's private collection of paintings, the majority of which are by American artists.

The Detroit Museum of Art has become the Detroit Institute of Arts, and is now the ward of the municipality under the management of the Art Commission of the City of Detroit. Among the American municipalities Detroit is the second to make part of its civic function the maintenance of a public art institute. St. Louis was the first.

The National Gallery of Art at Washington has received as a gift from Ralph Cross Johnson, Esq., of Washington, a notable collection of twenty-four oil paintings by great masters of Europe, among whom may be mentioned Titian, Rubens, Lawrence, Raeburn, Gainsborough, Hogarth, Guardi, and Nicholas Maes.

The first purchase was made from the Ranger Fund. This was a landscape by Bruce Crane, which was deposited as a temporary loan in the Art Museum at Syracuse. The entire income from this fund is to be spent in the purchase of paintings by American artists, on all of which the National Gallery of Art at Washington is to have an option until ten years after the artist's death. Meanwhile, however, the paintings are to be lent to various art institutions.

In the spring of 1919 a National Art Committee was formed of a group of public spirited and patriotic men and women headed by the Honorable Henry D. White as Chairman, with Mr. Herbert L. Pratt, of New York, as Secretary and Treasurer, with the object of securing portraits painted by American artists of military, civil and religious leaders of the World War. Six artists were commissioned by this committee to go abroad and paint certain celebrities. These artists were Cecilia Beaux, Joseph De Camp, Edmund C. Tarbell, Douglas Volk, John C. Johansen and Charles Hopkinson. Among the celebrities chosen to be painted were Premier Lloyd George, Field Marshal Haig, Admiral Beatty, Premier Clemenceau, Marshal Foch, Marshal Joffre, General Leman, Cardinal Mercier, King Albert of Belgium, and others. The portraits when completed will go to the National Gallery at Washington and become part of the permanent National collection.

The American art world has suffered extraordinary loss during the past year in the death of C. Y. Turner (January 1, 1919), Frank Duveneck (January 2, 1919), Kenyon Cox (March 17, 1919), and J. Alden Weir (December 9, 1919), painters of the foremost rank and international distinction.

It seems not inappropriate in this résumé to mention the passing of Theodore Roosevelt, an ardent and virile lover of art, who did much during his administration as President of the United States to advance art in America, by appointing the first Federal Art Commission, confirming the establishment of a National Gallery of Art, inducing the acceptance of the Freer Collection, advocating the adoption of the Park Commission Plan for the development of Washington, urging the present emplacement of the Lincoln Memorial, and by public measures and utterances upholding expert judgment in matters pertaining to art as well as by example showing honor to those artists who had rendered notable service.

DEPARTMENTS AND SCHOOLS OF ART

A Fine Arts Building, in connection with the University of Oklahoma, at Norman, Oklahoma, erected at a cost of $200,000, and containing 50 class rooms, lecture rooms, studios, exhibition gallery and auditorium, was completed and opened with appropriate ceremonies.

Through the gift of Paul G. McIntyre, of New York, a Department of Fine Arts in the School of Architecture has been established in connection with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. Prof. Fiske Kimball was called from the University of Michigan to take charge, and accepted.

Following the signing of the armistice an Art School for men of the A. E. F. was opened at Bellevue, France, under the auspices of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. and about 500 students were enrolled. The courses offered were in painting, sculpture, interior decoration, industrial and commercial art, design, ornamental modeling and architectural engineering. This school, which was under the direct charge of the A. E. F., George H. Gray, Major, Engineers, Commandant, had the following faculty: George S. Hellman, Director of Instruction in Fine and Applied Arts; Lloyd Warren, Director of Education and Dean of the Faculty; Ernest Piexetto, Head of Department of Painting; Solon Borglum, Head of Department of Sculpture; Leslie Cauldwell, Head of Department of Interior Decoration; William C. Titcomb, Head of Department of Itineraries; George H. Gray, Head of City Planning Division; Clarence E. Howard, Assistant to the Dean; Archibald M. Brown, Assistant, Department of Architecture; Robert F. Logan, Assistant, Department of Painting. Among the special lecturers were Arthur Kingsley Porter, John Galen Howard, and Lorado Taft, besides foreigners of great distinction.

RECORD PRICES

Some notable sales were made during the year outside of American auction rooms. Among these was the sale of the Howard Mansfield collection of Whistler etchings and lithographs, sold in New York to a private collector for a sum approximating $500,000, the largest transaction in prints ever made in this country. The collection comprised 420 etchings made from 370 plates, 162 lithographs of 158 subjects.

Whistler's portrait of Lady Meux, which he entitled "A Harmony in Pink and Gray," was purchased by the Duveens in England at a sum said to exceed $200,000. The same firm later in the year purchased at the Hamilton sale at Christie's, London, the portrait of the Misses Beckford, by Romney, for $273,000. Both of these paintings were brought to this country.

Reynolds' portrait of "Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse" was bid in by the Duke of Westminster at the sale of the Westminster collection for approximately $260,000.

A previously unknown portrait of Washington by Gilbert Stuart was purchased by the late Henry C. Frick for $75,000.

These were all record prices.

IMPORTANT WORKS IN SCULPTURE ERECTED

Some of the notable works in sculpture erected during the year are:

Edwin Booth, the great actor, by Edmond T. Quinn, erected in Gramercy Park, New York, by members of the Players' Club of that city, which Booth founded.

The Boy Scout Fountain, by Andrew O'Connor, dedicated to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt, Glen View, Chicago, Illinois, the gift of Edwin S. Jackman.

"Patriotism Guarding the Flag," by Paul W. Bartlett, a statue 6 feet 6 inches in height, carved in red Minnesota granite, and erected in Duluth, Minn., at the foot of a great flagstaff designed by Cass Gilbert, architect.

"The Evangeline Wilbour Blashfield Memorial Fountain," Queensboro Bridge Market, New York, stone and mosaic in color, by E. H. Blashfield, painter; Eli Harvey, sculptor, and C. W. Stoughton, architect; gift of the Municipal Art Society of New York.

The Rev. George Whitefield, by R. Tait McKenzie, an heroic bronze statue of the famous evangelist erected in the Dormitory Triangle of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

"The Aviator," by Gutzon Borglum, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia, also gift of Paul G. McIntyre.

"The Pioneer," by A. Phimister Proctor, erected on the grounds of the University of Oregon, the gift of Joseph N. Teal, of Portland.

Group to the Confederate Women of Maryland, by J. Maxwell Miller, Baltimore, Maryland.

"The Meeting of Air and Water," a bronze and stone fountain, by Isidore Konti, erected in Audubon Park, New Orleans, La.

"Bucking Broncho" and "Indian Scout," by A. Phimister Proctor, erected in Denver, Colorado, the gift of J. K. Mullen and Stephen Knight.

"Sullivan Gates," by L. Lentelli, representing "Mining and Agriculture," Denver, Colorado.

Bronze group of "Penguins," by Albert Laessle, erected in the Zoological Garden, Philadelphia, and animal bronze entitled "Billy," by the same artist, set up in Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia, by the Fairmont Park Art Association.

BUILDINGS OF NOTE COMPLETED

Building came almost to a standstill during the war, hence the record in this field for the year 1918-19 is exceedingly small. Note should be made, however, of the completion of certain model towns, designed and created under the direction of the Federal Housing Commission, such as Yorkship Village, South Philadelphia, for the Hogg Island employees, and a smaller but likewise well-designed village at Indian Head, Maryland, the Naval Proving Base, to mention only two.

The Swedenborgian Cathedral at Bryn Athyn, Pennsylvania, of which Ralph Adams Cram was architect, notable both for design and for having been constructed after mediæval methods, was completed.

An imposing monumental building, erected by the Federal Government as an "Annex" to the Treasury Department at Washington, designed by Cass Gilbert, architect, was completed.

Important additions in the way of cloisters were made to the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania.

A Greek Theatre with Colonnade of Civic Benefactors was erected in the Civic Center by the City of Denver, Colorado.

Two mural paintings by John S. Sargent, recently completed, were unveiled at the Public Library, Boston, October 5, 1919. The subjects are "The Church" and "The Synagogue."

ART AND VICTORY

The Great War practically came to an end with the signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918. In celebrating this event the artists lent special aid. In New York victory, like the war itself, was most spectacularly staged. At the time of the drive for the Victory Loan there was a great window display on Fifth Avenue, when paintings and sculpture, by the leading artists, in commemoration of the war and of the making of peace, were shown.

In connection with the Victory celebration in New York a notable series of mural paintings was executed. The block between Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Streets on Park Avenue was converted into what was known as "Victory Way." Here, behind the speakers' stand, was a frieze of mural paintings 160 feet long and 10 feet high made up of a series of seven panels entitled "The Continents of the Earth Contributing to Victory." The central panel, 15 feet high and 28 feet 6 inches wide, was by Arthur Crisp and showed the "World Victorious." The other panels, each 10 feet by 21 feet in dimensions, were as follows: "North America," by Frederick J. Waugh; "South America," by Charles S. Chapman; "Australia," by James Monroe Hewlett; "Europe," by W. T. Benda; "Africa," by Arthur S. Covey, and "Asia," by Edith M. Magonigle. This series of panels for out-door decoration was the result of a collaborative effort on the part of the painters, a general scheme suggested by Mrs. Magonigle being adopted and all of the paintings done at the same time and at the same place.

To welcome the return of the New York troops a great triumphal arch of temporary character was erected at Madison Square, a free copy of the Arch of Constantine, designed by Thomas Hastings and surmounted by a sextriga by Paul W. Bartlett. The spandrels of the center arch on the south were by Andrew O'Connor, on the north by Isidore Konti. The smaller arches were by Philip Martiny, Ulysses A. Ricci, Carl A. Heber and F. M. Tonetti; the oblong pier panels on the south by Gertrude V. Whitney, on the north by Mahonri Young; the circular ones by John Flanagan and Chester Beach, and on the north by Henri Crenier and Henry M. Shrady. The southern figures surmounting the columns were by Herbert Adams, those on the opposite side by Daniel C. French. The eagles on the south were the work of Eli Harvey, and on the north by F. G. R. Roth. Other works on the east and west sides of the arch were by P. Testi and R. Hinton Perry. John Gregory did the pair of panels for the walls of the smaller arches. In all, twenty-three sculptors contributed to the completed work.

Philadelphia likewise put on gala dress in celebration of Victory. The decorations were in the hands of an Advisory Council of the Art Association of Philadelphia, who appointed a special committee of artists, headed by Thornton Oakley, for this purpose. Owing to these artists' efforts the city during the Victory Campaign was not merely a pile of bunting but splendidly picturesque. The Court of Honor, the city's central square, was concentrated color. Here across the lofty face of City Hall a mighty sunburst flamed, against which towered the Victory statue. Flanking the court, ten giant flagpoles flung their standards. Beyond the Court of Honor, radiating up and down the adjacent streets, were the Courts of the Allies.

In an effort to induce the erection of war memorials of appropriate form and character the American Federation of Arts early in the year appointed a Special Committee on War Memorials, with the Hon. William H. Taft as honorary head and Charles Moore, Chairman of the Federal Commission of Fine Arts, as Chairman. This committee issued a circular of advice which was widely distributed, and got together a National Committee of expert professional advisers. One day of the annual convention in New York, May, 1919, was devoted to the subject, as were two issues of the American Magazine of Art, the Federation's official publication. In addition to which three exhibitions of photographs of noteworthy memorials were sent about, and an illustrated lecture circulated.

With the same purpose the Municipal Art Society of New York issued an illustrated pamphlet, the American Civic Society got out a bulletin, and the War Camp Community Service established a Bureau of Memorial Buildings, and in the interest of this form of memorial issued several illustrated pamphlets.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONSHIP

To increase friendliness between the United States and the Allied Nations pictorial propaganda has been employed, and during the year several notable collections of French, British and Canadian pictures were shown in this country. To enumerate:

An exhibition of war paintings by soldier artists of France was held under the auspices of the French High Commission, first in New York City and then in other cities of the United States.

From England came an exhibit of large photographs showing the activity of Britain's navy during the war, and an official exhibition of British war paintings, also a collection of British war lithographs, all of which were shown in the several large cities of the East and Middle West.

Under the direction of the Committee on Public Information of the Division of Pictorial Publicity, an Allied War Salon, including works by American, British and French artists, was held in the Galleries of the American Art Association in New York in December, 1918, and later in the Galleries of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh.

There were special exhibitions of war lithographs by Forain and Steinlen.

An extremely important exhibition of paintings (not of war subjects) by Leut. Lemordant, of France, who as a result of wounds lost his sight in the Great War, and to whom Yale University awarded the Howland Memorial Prize, was circulated among the Art Museums under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts. Lieut. Lemordant visited the United States in the spring of 1919 and gave a series of conferences on art which proved most inspiring.

By invitation of the French Government, an exhibition of about 100 paintings and 20 pieces of sculpture by American artists was assembled under the auspices of a Special Committee in New York and sent to France and shown in the Luxembourg Gallery in the fall of 1919. In return courtesy an exhibition of approximately the same size, works by contemporary French painters and sculptors, was later sent to this country under French governmental auspices and set forth in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

ART AND AMERICANIZATION

The Cleveland Museum of Art held during April, 1919, an interesting Homelands Exhibition of objects from the home countries by foreign-born residents of Cleveland, gathered together through the co-operation of the Public Schools and the Public Library and assembled in national groups which gave undoubted evidence of the tradition of craftsmanship and the love of beauty and color which was brought to America as a cultural contribution by those of European birth. Programs, which included addresses, the singing of national music and dancing in costume were given during the exhibition by groups of various nationalities.

An exhibition of handicrafts of many nations was held in June in the Gallery of the Art Alliance of America, 10 East Forty-second Street, New York City. This was brought together through the co-operation of the settlement houses and comprised the work of foreigners exclusively, although most of it was done in this country. Nineteen nationalities were represented. Workers in native costume were in the galleries and gave demonstrations of their crafts.

An All American Exposition was held in the Colosseum, Chicago, for a fortnight beginning August 30, 1919. The art section included characteristic handicrafts, painting and sculpture by foreign-born citizens and their children.

Under the management of Allen Eaton, Field Secretary of the American Federation of Arts, and under the joint auspices of the American Federation of Arts and the University of the State of New York, an exhibition of Arts and Crafts of the Homelands was held in the Albright Gallery, Buffalo, from October 22nd to November 2nd, and in the Education Building, Albany, from November 23rd to December 2nd. The exhibitions, although of similar character, were not identical, as in each instance the exhibits were assembled in the home city. The exhibits were set forth according to nationalities, and special programs were given during the period by representatives of the several countries. The attendance at Buffalo exceeded 41,000 and at Albany was proportionately as great.

ART AND INDUSTRY

A wave of increased interest in industrial arts has swept over the country and was exemplified in an exhibition of handicrafts and the industrial arts held in Buffalo Academy of Fine Arts, under the auspices of the Buffalo Fine Arts Academy, the Buffalo Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary Club, etc., in the early fall of 1919.

In the spring of 1919 a National Association of Decorative Arts and Industries was formed in New York by representatives of the different art trades and industries, with Dr. James Parton Haney, President, and William Laurel Harris, Secretary.

From October 15th to November 11th, 1919, an Exposition of Industrial Arts and Crafts was held in St. Louis, under the auspices of the St. Louis Art League. In connection with this exposition a Conference on Industrial Art was conducted, with Joseph Pennell, as Chairman. Resolutions were passed (1) endorsing a National Department of Art with a secretary who would be a member of the Cabinet, (2) appealing to the Secretary of Commerce to organize traveling exhibits of industrial art, (3) urging the passage of a law for the better protection of designs, and (4) approving the objects of the Exposition and spirit of co-operation which it displayed. This Exposition and conference gave expression to the increased convicton of the important part that art plays in industry, and to the prevalent feeling that something ought to be done to advance art in this particular.

As indicative of the relationship between art and the industrial world mention should be made of the fact that Gerrit A. Beneker, painter and illustrator, who has given much of his time to rendering industrial themes, was early in the year appointed "special artist" for the Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company of Cleveland, and served during the year most successfully in this capacity, working a part of his time in the shops with the men to get their point of view, illustrating the Works' Magazine, painting portraits of the working men, bringing art to them and opening the way for them to share in the benefits and privileges offered by the Art Museum.

An effort to take art into the homes of the people generally found expression in a "Comparative Exhibition" of furniture at the Minneapolis Institute of Art, in which the best modern American-made furniture was shown in comparison with the best furniture of other days and lands. The exhibit was arranged in rooms each completely furnished and serving as models.

A somewhat similar "Exhibition of Good Taste" was shown at approximately the same time in the John Herron Art Institute, Indianapolis. This exhibition was arranged primarily for a convention of the Indiana Retail Furniture Association, but was open to the public for a period of three weeks, during which time it was seen by thousands of visitors to the Institute galleries. This exhibition was set forth as in a five-room bungalow. The furniture in the different rooms was borrowed from various furniture houses of Indianapolis, as were the materials used for window draperies, etc.

MUSIC IN THE MUSEUMS

During the year music has been given a larger place than ever before in the Art Museums and has come into closer relationship with the graphic arts than at any time within the past century at least.

This development has been most marked in Cleveland, the Museum there being one of the first to introduce it. The musical activities at the Cleveland Museum have been under the direction of Thomas Whitney Surette, and have included lectures by Mr. Surette to adults and to college students, musical programs with interpretations by Mr. Surette, two concerts at the Museum by the Young People's Symphony Orchestra, and singing on Sunday evenings.

In Detroit, under the auspices of the Chamber Music Society and the Detroit Institute of Arts, Thomas Whitney Surette began in October, 1919, a series of classes two days each month at the Museum for school children, and in the afternoons of the same days classes for teachers, besides conducting Sunday afternoon programs at the Art Institute followed by community singing.

At the Metropolitan Museum, New York, a series of orchestral concerts, free to the public, were given under the direction of David Mannes in the late winter and early spring of 1918-19, the attendance reaching as high as 7,600 on a single evening. The cost of these concerts was donated by public spirited art and music loving citizens, in most instances trustees of the Museum.

In Chicago at the Art Institute a series of Sunday afternoon concerts has been regularly given under the direction of George Desch, an admission fee of 10 cents being charged. There have also been lectures on music.

At the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts every Sunday afternoon concerts have been given, a practice dating back several years. The programs, differing from week to week, included string quartettes, vocal and instrumental solos, as well as choruses of male voices or church choir singers. Large attendances were reported.

The Worcester Art Museum introduced music in the gallery for the benefit of the public. The first of a series of concerts was given on November 30, 1919, by the Boston Symphony Ensemble.

CORRELATION OF THE ARTS

A series of concerts, both orchestral and vocal, by the leading professional musicians was given in the great Stadium of the College of the City of New York on certain evenings during a period of eight weeks in the summer of 1919. These concerts were not free, but no seat sold for more than $1 and admission was but 25 cents. The Stadium seats 8,000, and on almost every occasion all seats were occupied. This was made possible through the generosity of Mr. Adolph Lewisohn, who believes that in thus giving the finest music under the best conditions at the lowest price a definite step is being taken to democratize art and raise the standard of living.

Stage art in Chicago has received encouragement from the Grand Opera Association and the groups of "little theater" performers. New experiments have been made under these auspices in the designing of stage settings and lighting, as well as in costuming, with interesting results.

The several arts have been called into co-operative effort in connection with the giving of great pageants. Most notable among those reported were:

In Cincinnati, a Centennial Pageant and Festival celebrating the granting of the charter to the City of Cincinnati was given in the Zoological Park in May, 1919.

The Pageant of Niké Apteros, written by James Parton Haney, was first presented at the annual meeting of the School Art League of New York City. It was published by that organization and given at some three hundred towns and cities, one of the most notable performances being by the Tulane University Summer School at New Orleans.

In Santa Fé, the great festival or pageant "Santa Fé Fiesta" was celebrated on September, 11, 12 and 13.

In Savannah, Pageant of the Play Festival on May 6th. Pageant in connection with centenary of the sailing of S. S. City of Savannah, 1819, the first steamship to cross the ocean. The festival lasted one week.

In Minneapolis, Historical Pageant at Minnetonka, on land and water, July, 1919. "Swords and Plowshares," by the Civic Players on the steps of the Institute, showing the changing motives of war since first history of man, July, 1919.

In Philadelphia, a pageant illustrating the Arts of Italy, Byzantium and Persia, combined with a circulating exhibition by the students of the Pennsylvania Museum School of Industrial Art, was held on May 22nd.

In Denver and St. Louis, a great Christmas masque, "The Evergreen Tree," by Percy McKaye, was given. The settings and costumes were by R. E. Jones and the music by Arthur Farwell. In Denver also a cantata, "Omar Khayyam," was given by the Denver Players, Denver Art Association and Municipal Chorus, on July 10, 1919.

For foundation, history and activities see Vol. XI, pp. 142-4.

Open daily, excepting the Fourth of July, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. (November 1st to March 1st, to 4 P.M.). Saturdays to 5 P.M. Sundays, 1 to 6 P.M. Admission free.

Chartered 1870; present building opened 1909. Annual meeting third Thursday in January; Board meetings third Thursdays in April, July and October. Annual dues of subscribers $10; membership 1,607. During 1918 attendance was 212,281; Print Study Room visited by 1,499 persons; 2,343 students worked in the Textile Study Room; 5,627 in the Library and 3,700 in the Photograph Room.

The collections of the Museum cover practically the entire field of art, though there has been no attempt to form an architectural collection. The most remarkable collection is in Oriental art. There is a collection of classical antiquities; Egyptian department has a unique collection of early Empire sculpture. The Museum's print department offers the best opportunity in America to study the history of the engraver's art.

The Museum issues a bi-monthly Bulletin, annual reports, handbook of the Museum, and special catalogues. A Leaflet Guide to the Museum is issued in vest-pocket size, giving directions for reaching all the departments and a plan of the galleries. The registry of local art has been continued in co-operation with the Municipal Art Commission.

A School of Art is maintained (see school section). The educational activities, under the direction of a Supervisor of Educational Work, include docent service, special talks on subjects in the Museum on Sunday afternoons, and University Extension courses in the Museum. Sunday docent service includes informal guidance of small groups (not more than six persons), the objects to be studied being determined by the wish of the majority. There has been special guidance for men in the service on Tuesday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Persons may receive training in museum work by serving as volunteer assistants. The photograph department lends to schools, clubs and classes in the immediate vicinity of Boston.

During the summer of 1918 there were 7,304 children from school playgrounds and settlement houses brought to the Museum for stories by Mrs. Scales and Mrs. Cronan. On ten Saturday afternoons during the winter Mrs. Scales told stories to children, the general title being "The Work of Our Hands"; and on five afternoons she conducted story-hours for the children of annual subscribers, the series being "With the Forerunners of our Allies." All stories told for children are woven about objects in the collections. Ten Thursday afternoon conferences were held from January to May.

Lecture courses for 1918-1919 included a course under the auspices of Simmons College by Mrs. C. E. Whitmore; six special lectures by invited speakers and by members of the staff; University Extension Courses and the lecture courses given by the instructors for the pupils of the School. Members of the staff gave 24 lectures outside the Museum.

Publications by officers of the Museum during 1918 include a number of articles and three books: "The Dance of Siva—fourteen Indian essays," by Ananda K. Coomaraswamy; "Museum Ideals of Purpose and Method," by Benjamin Ives Gilman; "Extracts from the 'Ch' uan Pu T'ung Chih' of Meng Lin" (translated), by Kojiro Tomita.

Acquitions 1918-19: "The Quarry," by G. Courbet; "The Day Before the Parting," by Joseph Israels; statuette of an Abbess, French Gothic; three statuettes of Apostles, French Gothic; stone relief of the Buddha preaching, Chinese, ninth to tenth century; twenty-one prints by van Meckenem.

Special exhibition of work by soldier artists of France in December, 1918.

Open 10 A.M. to 5 P.M.; Sundays, 2 to 5 P.M. Admission free Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday; 25 cents on Monday and Thursday.

Founded 1896. Annual meeting third Tuesday in April; Trustees' meeting fourth Tuesdays. Annual dues $5; membership 131. Attendance 1918-19 about 36,000. Collections include archæology, architecture, casts, coins and medals, furniture, ceramics, metalwork, Oriental objects, old and modern paintings, colonial silver, sculpture, textiles, woodwork, prints, photographs, and a library. Of special note are the collection of paintings, the Bancroft collection of Japanese prints, and the Goodspeed collection of engravings by American masters.

Lectures are offered to the public, to special groups of persons and organizations. Lantern slides and photographs are lent through Worcester County to clubs, schools, etc., and lectures are given by members of the staff in the Museum and in the towns of the county. A new method of instruction has been adopted in the Children's Department; it proceeds from theories—theories of color harmony, line character, etc., to a study of works of art illustrating the theories. Different modes of design and representation have been taken up, examples in the galleries studied, and some practical work done, so that the students learn to distinguish between modes and also to recognize the qualities in each. The work has received much assistance from the Superintendent of Schools and the children are allowed to visit the Museum during the school hours; a distinct recognition by the school authorities of the value of the Museum in the mental development of the child. Among the innovations was the formation of a class of teachers from the public schools and another class composed of pupils, one from each of the eighth grades, who are most advanced in drawing. An art school is maintained (see school section).

Admission is free, except on Mondays and Tuesdays, when a fee of 25 cents is charged for adults and 10 cents for all under the age of 16. Copyists and public and private school teachers and pupils are admitted free at all times. All holidays are free days.

The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences has two museums, the Central (Brooklyn) Museum and the Children's Museum. Both include in their scope natural science and ethnology, as well as art, the main or Central Museum being organized on a well-defined departmental plan. At present, comparatively little art work is done at the Children's Museum, except through its library.

The Central Museum established 1889; first section of the present building dedicated 1897. Annual membership dues $10.

The art collections include Egyptology; architecture; bronzes; a hall of casts of Greek and Roman antiquity; casts of the Renaissance period; modern sculpture; Greek terra cottas (Tanagra); Greek vases (small); ancient glass; coins and medals; drawings; Oriental and European ceramics; paintings, old and modern; photographs; prints; textiles and vestments.

The Central Museum has docent service, including motion pictures and illustrated lectures for school children in co-operation with the School Art League; lectures for the public; furnishes classroom or lectureroom for societies, teachers, etc.; an information bureau; research work is done by various members of the staff. The Library, containing about 25,000 volumes for reference, is open daily 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.; and on Sundays 2 to 6 P.M.

The Museum publishes an annual report, a Quarterly Magazine, and scientific bulletins. Also Memoirs on Art and Archæology and catalogues of its various collections.

Open daily; Saturdays and holidays, 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.; Sundays and Christmas Day, 1 to 6 P.M.; other days 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. in winter and 6 P.M. in summer. Free except Monday and Friday, when admission is 25 cents; free at all times to members, copyists and Public School teachers and pupils, soldiers, sailors and marines.

Three members of the staff are detailed for expert guidance; the cost is 25 cents a person, with minimum charge of $1 an hour, except for members and Public School teachers and pupils to whom this service is free. From January, 1918, to October, 1919, men in uniform (soldiers, sailors and marines) were shown the Museum collection every day, including Sundays, without charge.

Photographic copies of all objects belonging to the Museum (not only paintings, but the objects in every collection) are made by the Museum photographer and by several firms. Prices range from postals two for five cents to large colored prints at $10. The publications in print number over sixty and include catalogues of the various departments, handbooks of special exhibitions, and a History of the Museum; a monthly Bulletin is issued, which is sent free to members, to others $2 a year and 20 cents a number; a quarterly Children's Bulletin is issued at 40 cents a year, 10 cents a number.

Incorporated 1870. Dues, annual members, $10; sustaining, $25; fellowship, $100; total membership Dec. 31, 1918, was 6,869.

Collections include the fine arts—painting, sculpture and architecture—as well as what are usually called decorative or industrial arts. Ancient art includes Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Phœnician, Cypriote, Etruscan, Greek and Roman antiquities. In painting the attempt is made to illustrate the history of the art from the Middle Ages to the present time, with especial attention to the work of American artists. The decorative arts include woodwork, metalwork, ceramics and textiles. The collections represent the East and the Near East (China, Japan, Persia and Asia Minor), Europe and America. Special attention is given to American art.

Broadly speaking, the first floor of the Museum is filled with the Egyptian and classical collections, the casts, arms and armor, musical instruments and modern sculpture; the second floor with the art of the East and Near East, textiles, laces, paintings, including the Altman collection, and prints. The Pierpont Morgan collection of European decorative arts, chronologically arranged—the Merovingian period to the nineteenth century—occupies a wing by itself. The Library and Photograph Departments, occupy a separate wing. A guide to the collections, sold at 10 cents, points out the most interesting or important objects in the different galleries.

The chief events of the year 1918 were the opening of the Pierpont Morgan collections in the galleries set aside for their permanent display; the opening of the Mr. and Mrs. Isaac D. Fletcher collection in a temporary gallery; and the opening of a section devoted to Indian art including the Indian temple presented by Robert W. and Lockwood de Forest.

The total number of visitors was 635,497. The cost of operating the Museum was $590,782.56, the amount available for the payment of this expense—city appropriation ($233,000), income from endowment funds, admission fees. sales of handbooks, etc.—was $360,785.67, leaving $229,996.89 to be provided out of other sources of income augmented by private contributions. The acquisitions of the year numbered 1,654, of which 10 were received by bequest, 379 by gift and 1,265 by purchase. Under the bequest of Isaac D. Fletcher, besides the collection of objects of art received in 1917, $2,093,013.50 was received.

Artists and designers using the Museum during 1918 were as follows:

Working in Galleries	7,705
Working in Study Rooms	1,127
Individuals with Instructor	2,196
Lantern Slide Borrowers	899
Slides Used	31,920

During 1918-1919 the educational work included free public lectures on Sunday afternoons from October to April; a shorter course of free Saturday lectures; a course of story-hours for the children of members; another for all children; course in aesthetic criticism for members and others; six lectures to pupils in the elementary and high schools of the city, in co-operation with the American Museum of Natural History; four courses of seminars for designers, buyers and salespeople; four lectures for the deaf; six lectures for the blind. Definite work was done with public school classes and lectures were given in both elementary and high school buildings. Sets of photographs were lent to branch public libraries and to public schools. Educational work in the Museum has been conducted by many outsiders, including the Extension Departments of Columbia and New York Universities, Hunter College, Pratt Institute, the School of Ethical Culture, the School Art League, Art in Trades Club and various art schools. 9,770 attended the lectures; 15,655 children attended the story-hours; 26,688 people—students, designers, manufacturers—worked in the galleries, study rooms and library; and 27,224 children came to classes from schools.

Two free orchestral concerts were given in the Main Entrance Hall on February 9 and 16 by a symphony orchestra under the conductorship of David Mannes. Two series of four concerts each were given in 1919 to audiences aggregating over 40,000.

For foundation and history see Vol. XI, p. 323.

Galleries open free, daily, 10 A.M. to 10 P.M.; Sundays, 2 to 6 P.M. The permanent collection contains modern paintings, drawings and prints; bronzes; sculpture in marble; and casts of classic and modern sculpture and of architecture.

Founded 1896. The Carnegie Institute is now composed of the Department of Fine Arts, the Museum, and the Carnegie Institute of Technology, The Department of Fine Arts, the Museum, the Library and the Carnegie Music Hall occupy the same building. Endowment fund for the Department of Fine Arts gives an annual income of $75,000.

Because of the European War the Annual International Exhibition of Paintings has not been held since 1914. Plans have been made to establish a Children's Museum of Art for exhibitions, lectures, and other activities of interest to children. The scope of the Extension Work has been enlarged to increase lending collections arranged in an educational manner. Small portable cases illustrating artistic processes and showing the steps involved between the raw material and the finished artistic product have been made for use in the art classes of the local high schools.

There is regular co-operation between the public school system of Pittsburgh and the Carnegie Institute, whereby the eighth grades of the public schools are sent to the Institute for instruction. The school board voted the necessary funds for the payment of carfares. Three lessons on the appreciation of art, one on painting, one on sculpture and the third on architecture, Founded 1869. Meetings of the trustees are held on the third Mondays of January, April, June and October; annual meeting in January.

The collections consist chiefly of works by the modern painters and sculptors, including important examples by the masters of the Barbizon School, and an unusually fine collection of sculptures by A. L. Barye. Within recent years special attention has been given to the acquisition of works by the American painters, with a view to making the collection as representative as possible. There is also a large collection of casts from antique and Renaissance sculptures.

A free art school is conducted in connection with the Gallery with both day and night classes. (See school section.)

Recent Acquisitions: "Maternity," oil, by Gari Melchers; "Environs de Cremieu," water color, by Francois Auguste Ravier; and a large collection of paintings from the estates of Mr. and Mrs. George Lothrop Bradley.

A large exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings is held biennially with prizes, donated by Hon. William A. Clark, totaling $5,000. The Seventh Biennial Exhibition is scheduled to open December 21, 1919.

Romney, Reynolds, Lawrence, Hoppner and others; the Charles L. Freer collection, presented in 1906 with extensive additions annually since then, which now consists of over 6,200 objects and contains paintings by Whistler, Thayer, Dewing, Tryon, Homer, Sargent and other American artists; oriental paintings, pottery and other art objects (this collection is retained in Detroit by Mr. Freer pending the completion of the building now being erected especially for it at the expense of the donor); the William T. Evans collection of 151 paintings by 106 contemporary American artists besides many wood engravings; the collection of 82 drawings by contemporary French artists, presented to the people of the United States by the citizens of the French Republic as a token of their appreciation of the efforts of American citizens toward relieving the distress occasioned by the European war, and the Ralph Cross Johnson collection.

The museum collections other than those of the gallery embrace paintings of Indians and Indian subjects; archæological objects; a large collection of religious art works; an extensive representation of the graphic arts; small but instructive collections of ceramics, bronzes, and glassware; the Hugo Worch collection of 143 instruments illustrating the development of the pianoforte; an important collection of textiles; and several large loan collections of oriental art. The division of history possesses a large collection of medals; foreign coins, and the largest collection of postage stamps in the country, besides objects of metal work, jewelry, porcelain, furniture, and many other articles of house and personal adornment.

The division of graphic arts comprises exhibits relating to the development of writing and painting; to the various color processes of printing, from the old engraving in color to the recent rotary intaglio printed in four colors; to printing for the blind, book binding, and Chinese and Japanese painting; a historical collection of engravings and etchings, including examples of American work; some old printing presses, and technical exhibits comprising the tools and materials used, and illustrations of the various steps in the several processes of reproducing pictures, including the modern methods based on photography.

Because of the occupancy of the building by one of the War Bureaus, the National Gallery of Art was closed to the public from July, 1918, to April, 1919. The visitors during the remainder of the year numbered 132,859.

There were no special exhibitions in the Gallery during 1918-1919. In the Museum an extensive series of pictures assembled by the Liberty Loan Committee of the Second Federal Reserve District of the Treasury Department was installed in connection with the War Collections, and an exceptionally fine loan collection of oriental rugs was also on display at the close of the year.

Incorporated 1885. Under the charter of the City of Detroit, adopted in June, 1918, provision was made for a Municipal Arts Commission, consisting of four members, with powers and duties summarized as follows: It shall hold in the name of the city such real estate as may be necessary for the accomplishment of its objects; shall build, operate, and maintain suitable buildings for works of art and auditorium purposes, to be known as the Detroit Institute of Arts; shall acquire, collect, own and exhibit objects of art, such as are usually acquired by museums of art, and shall have such other powers and duties as may be necessary for the proper discharge of its duties.

Under the provisions of this charter, the corporation of the Detroit Museum of Art conveyed to the Arts Commission all its property and collections, to be administered by the Municipal Arts Commission, and hereafter to be designated as the Detroit Institute of Arts. Meetings of the Arts Commission are held every Monday afternoon. Annual meeting in June. Income for maintenance is $59,000; for purchase of collections $20,000. Additional funds for purchase are held in trust by the Detroit Museum of Art.

The collections include: an Egyptian Department, a Classical Department, Print Department, Department of Oriental Art, collection of paintings of the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, as well as modern paintings, and a Children's Museum, consisting of material suitable for circulation in the public schools, and of particular interest to children.

During 1918-19 many of the galleries were redecorated and the collections rearranged, looking toward a more orderly departmental installation. A Colonial Room has been established in which is assembled the furniture, household furnishings, paintings, and other objects of the colonial period; an important feature of this room is the especially fine collection of old dark blue Staffordshire historical china, assembled by the late Mrs. Arthur W. Soper and presented by her daughter, Mrs. Gustavus D. Pope. The room adjacent to the Library has been made into a Print Room, where a selection of prints from the important collection of the Museum will always be suitably framed and hung in conformity with the suggestions of Mr. FitzRoy Carrington, Curator of Prints of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts; the prints not on display will be available to students under the supervision of the Librarian, Miss Isabel Weadock. The Egyptian Collection has been rearranged and installed in a room, prepared for it on the first floor, under the supervision of Mrs. Caroline Ransom Williams.

The educational work of the Museum is wide in its scope. There are Sunday afternoon talks in the auditorium, together with musical programs; the Society of Arts and Crafts, the Archæological Society, the Michigan Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and other societies, hold their lecture courses jointly with the Museum. Lantern slides, photographs, and objects from the collections are available for the use of schools and study clubs. A branch of the Detroit Public Library, in charge of Miss Isabel Weadock, fulfills an important sphere of usefulness. A bulletin is published monthly from October to May. Free sketch classes under the direction of an instructor from the Recreation Commission are held Friday evenings and Saturday mornings. During 1918-19, through the co-operation of the Chamber Music Society, free concerts were given by the Society of Ancient Instruments, the Flonzaley Quartette, the Trio de Lutece, and a number of others including the best talent from the local conservatories. Three lectures on music were given by Thomas Whitney Surette.

Note.—Each organization is listed under the city where the office is located. State societies are entered immediately following the State heading and precede the cities in each State.

Federations and national societies without permanent headquarters form the first group and are entered before the States. A full index with cross references will be found at the end of the book.

The Greek cross (✠) preceding the name of an organization indicates that it is a Chapter of The American Federation of Arts. The asterisk following the name of an organization indicates that exhibitions were held during the period covered by this report but it was not possible to list them this year owing to the amount of space required by Who's Who.

Editorial Staff and Offices

"American Art Annual."

Editorial Office, 1741 New York Ave., Washington, D. C.

Organized 1909. Incorporated 1916. The membership is made up of both individuals and organizations, the latter styled Chapters. Annual dues of Chapters $10; Associate members $3 (received "The American Magazine of Art"); Active members $10 (have the privilege of voting, receive "The American Magazine of Art," the "American Art Annual" and other publications distributable to members); Sustaining members $100 a year. There are 230 chapters, 647 active members, 1,531 associate members.

The tenth annual convention was held at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City, May 15, 16 and 17. The attendance was the largest of any convention yet held, 218 delegates and 111 members registering. On the evening before the convention assembled a delightful reception was given in the Pierpont Morgan Hall of the Museum by the Trustees in honor of the delegates. On May 15th both sessions were devoted to the general subject of "War Memorials," a subject of peculiar timeliness and interest. The speakers at the morning session were Charles Moore, Edwin H. Blashfield and Frederick Law Olmsted. At the afternoon session papers by Hon. Elihu Root, Harold S. Buttenheim, Cass Gilbert and Morris Gray were presented. Open discussions followed. The morning session on Friday, May 16th, was devoted to The Peace Program of the Federation—Its Opportunities and Extension of Its Activities. The speakers were the President, Robert W. de Forest, the Secretary, Leila Mechlin; Oscar B. Jacobson and Rossiter Howard. Excellent suggestions were given by several not on the regular program. At the afternoon session of May 16th the subject was "Art and Labor," with addresses by Henry W. Kent, Joseph Pennell and Gerrit A. Beneker. The last session was given over to the general subject of "Art and the Nation." The first speaker was Hon. Charles D. Walcott on "A National Gallery of Art"; F. W. Reynolds, of the U. S. Bureau of Education, next told "What the Government is Doing to Promote Visual Instruction"; Thomas Whitney Surette and David Mannes presented the subject of "Music in the Art Museums." Several resolutions were adopted in the interest of competent planning of the landscape, architectural and sculptural treatment of all works of a commemorative character undertaken by the Government at home or in France.

A special feature of this convention was the privilege granted delegates and members of visiting the Library of J. P. Morgan, and the collections of Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, Senator William A. Clark, Mr. Henry Clay Frick and Mr. George Blumenthal. There were informal dinner conferences on Friday evening at the Hotel McAlpin, with "Round Table Discussions" on "War Memorials," "Art for School Children" and "Traveling Exhibitions." On Saturday, May 17th, the National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors gave a reception in the rooms of the Architectural League.

The regular work is chiefly along four lines. Sends out traveling exhibitions; circulates illustrated lectures; publishes "The American Magazine of Art," an illustrated monthly magazine, and the "American Art Annual," a standard book of reference for art in the United States.

The Federation has also conducted a campaign in the interest of War Memorials of an appropriate and artistically worthy character, by the establishment of a General Committee on War Memorials, and special Regional Sub-committees with Professional Advisors in different parts of the country. In connection with this campaign the May and September numbers of The American Magazine of Art were devoted largely to this subject, and a circular of advice has been issued, as well as an illustrated lecture on the subject.

WHO'S WHO IN ART

1919

Who's Who in Art

Publisher's Note

"Who's Who in Art" is the directory section of the "American Art Annual." As heretofore, the directory has been compiled chiefly from the membership lists of the leading art societies in the United States and exhibitors at same. Data blanks were sent out in the early spring and the information thus received, with that sent by the artists for previous volumes, has formed the basis of the biographical notes.

This volume contains 5,043 names and addresses of painters, sculptors and illustrators; the last issue of this directory, that in Volume XIV, 1917, contained 5,022 names. One thousand and five (1,005) names appear here for the first time; these are new exhibitors who have been represented in the current exhibitions during the past two years. Nine hundred and eighty-four (984) names have been dropped because no answer has been received to our request for present address, the artist has not exhibited since 1917; is not a member of a recognized art society, or has died during the two-year period.

When two addresses are given and the second one is preceded by "h," it indicates that the first address is the studio, the second is the home. The artist's medium, whether painter, sculptor, illustrator, or craftsman, is indicated by letters at the beginning of the biographical note; when no biographical information was obtainable, the letters are used in parentheses after the address. The date after the abbreviation of a society of which an artist is a member, refers to the time of election.

The lists of "Work" under the names are limited to paintings in public galleries, monumental sculpture, and published illustrations.

The names of married women include the maiden name; they are preceded by "Mrs." or followed by the husband's name in parentheses. The maiden name is also entered in alphabetical order, with a cross reference. All names of women without title are "Miss."

Index

This index is arranged by cities and forms a cross reference to the main body of the book where reports are grouped by States. There are also cross references under the following heads: Aid for Artists, Architecture, Circulating Exhibitions, Open Exhibitions, Federations, Galleries, Graphic Arts, Handicrafts, Libraries, Municipal Art, National, School Arts, Schools of Art, Sculpture, and Western Societies. These headings are in italic caps.

Each society is entered under the city where the office of the secretary is located; under the name of the State or under National when the residence of the secretary changes from year to year. The name of the city is omitted from the title of the societies in the index, but the full official title (without the article) is used in the body of the book.

The special articles in volumes I to XVI are listed in this index; these titles are in italics. Societies which were entered in Volumes I to X, but whch have been discontinued or which, for one reason or another, are not in Volume XVI, will be found in the index of Volume XI, with volume and page of the last entry.
